

Nemesis glared with intense rage at her tormentor, the diabolic villain, Blaze. She knew that she had only one chance to stop Blaze from utterly destroying the world. With a sudden movement, she threw a shuriken at him, aiming for his eyes. A bright blue flash indicated Blaze's force field was operational and Nemesis knew her attempt was futile.

Nemesis would have to use her powers of weather control, teleportation, and super sonic speed to stop Blaze from stealing the world's water, otherwise all life would soon vanish. Nemesis's powers were the only obstacle to Blaze's world domination. She blacked out as Blaze squeezed the life from her body. As she went unconscious she remembered how it all began.
